

Honeycomb

George Middleton of College Park, Md., an IBM systems engineer, holds a four-inch data cartridge — there are 3,382 — which is kept in this new computer storage unit named "TELOPS." Being developed for NASA, the unit will handle 169.1 billion characters of information transmitted by 25 U.S. scientific satellites now orbiting the earth.

Stamp conspiracy

NEW YORK (AP) — The Italian Historical Society of America says a forthcoming United States postal stamp represents a "civil conspiracy" against the inventor of the telephone.

The stamp bears a likeness of Alexander Graham Bell who the society claims was a Johnny-come-lately. Asserting that the real inventor was one Antonio Meucci, an Italian immigrant, the society filed suit Thursday in U.S. District Court in Manhattan to block issuance of the Bell stamp on March 10.

The government said the U.S. postmaster-general is "not a referee of historical issues" and that $340,000 has been spent for printing the 13-cent stamp commemorating the 100th anniversary of the telephone's invention.

Urging that the Brooklyn-based society pursue its claim in "the market place of ideas," the government said the society might in that way get a Meucci stamp issued, too.
