1,500 women rejected

OTTAWA (CP) — A senior insurance executive, an economist and a top counsellor with one of Canada's largest investment firms were among 1,500 women rejected as prospective members of the Royal Bank's board of directors, a bank shareholder said Friday.

Ruth Bell, also a past president of the Canadian Federation of University Women, said a list of 1,500 names was compiled from the federation's roster of qualified women and submitted to bank president W. Earle McLaughlin as suggestions for board members.

The list included many women with business experience, Mrs. Bell said.

Mr. McLaughlin said earlier this week that a cross-Canada search failed to produce the names of any women with sufficient qualifications for the position. He said the bank has been under pressure from women's organizations to appoint a woman to the 48-member, all-male board, but the women have failed to make any constructive recommendations.

Whistle stoppers

Belfast Peace leaders Betty Williams, left, and Mairead Corrigan display some of 4,000 whistles waiting for them when they moved into new offices in Belfast, Northern Ireland, Thursday. The whistles, worth 2,000 pounds, were presented by a West German woman with the idea they would be blown by Belfast Peace members who saw an incident developing and sought assistance to end it.

Jelly-side down . . .

by Nancy Stahl

There are few sortees that I enjoy less than the annual excursion to outfit the children with school clothes.

The first dilemma lies in finding something in their closets in late August that is still sufficiently presentable to wear to a shopping mall.

"What's wrong with the way I look?" my daughter Laurie demanded.

"I refuse to be seen with anyone wearing a T-shirt that says I Like Being a Sex Object," I retorted.

"But you can hardly read it through the grass stains!" Laurie protested.

"And those skimpy cut offs! People can see your underwear!"

"No, they can't. I'm not wearing any."

"I'm ready to go," my son Eric announced.

"Sez you!" I retorted. "Where are your shoes?"

"I lost them two weeks ago."

"You LOST them?!"

"They were too small anyway."

Once at the shopping mall, the children headed directly for a unisex shop called The Purple Unicorn.

"Wow!" exclaimed Laurie. "What groovy clothes!"

"Where?" I bellowed, trying to make myself heard over a piped-in recording of what sounded like the anguished screams of someone having his toenails ripped out with red-hot pliers to the accompaniment of electric guitars.

"Why is it so DARK in here?"

It took me twenty minutes of groping around in the semi-darkness to find the exit and join three other mothers who were sitting glumly in the middle of the mall, soaking their feet in a decorative fountain.

"Unisex fashions," sighed one mother. "Kinky boutiques. What's it all going to come to?"

"I figure about $178," I sighed.

Women ordination supporter elected

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A church leader who favors ordination of women as priests won election as vice-president of the House of Deputies at the United States Episcopal Church's national convention Sunday.

Charles Lawrence of Pomona, N.Y., chosen as vice-president over two other candidates, said his support of women's ordination probably helped elect him to the post, one of the church's top offices.

"I would not be surprised if it did to some degree," he said, predicting approval at the church's triennial national general convention of the controversial move to authorize ordaining women.

Women are not specifically banned from being priests in the Episcopal Church, but tradition has kept the priesthood all male.

The election of Lawrence puts him in a position to succeed Dr. John Coburn, bishop-elect of Boston, as president of the House of Deputies, a post to be filled Sept. 23 at the end of the 13-day convention.

Dr. Coburn steps down then to take up his new bishop's office after nine years as head of the 912-member House of Deputies.

Lawrence, 61, black and a sociology professor at Brooklyn College in New York City, won the vice-presidency with 413 votes to 346 for Walker Taylor of Wilmington, N.C.,

Weekly bridge winners named

Results of games played last week in the Spruce Capital Duplicate Bridge Club were as follows:

Monday, Bill Evelyn Lim were first followed by Eva Partel and Therese Cheramy.

Tuesday in games for intermediate players Jean Fraser and Ethel Disher tied with Mike Hargreaves and John Polyk.

In Wednesday's games the team of Hazel Stowards, Margo Doolittle and beginning players Jane and John Kennedy finished with the most points. Second were Georgia Wilson, Gerry Larson, Pierre Roy and Clare Hewson.

Bishop Allin, in an opening address to the convention Saturday, urged the church to provide room both for the wing that favors ordaining women and for the wing that strongly objects to it—what he called "two manifestations of the ministry."

All games were played in Duchess Park Community School.

Conductor hits 'token' equality

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada's first and only female conductor thinks it is a shame women have been excluded from leading the country's major symphony orchestras during a time when the feminist movement has broken down many other barriers.

There have been a few changes in the United States, said Ethel Stark, but the improvement appears more tokenism than any real desire to inject equality into the music field.

"It's the same old story of having to go abroad to gain recognition," she said.

Ms. Stark, originally from Montreal, founded and conducted the Montreal Women's Symphony Orchestra which performed for 25 years until it encountered financial problems and was forced to fold.

She was also the first Canadian and only woman to conduct the Tokyo Asahi Philharmonic and the first woman to conduct the Jerusalem, Toronto, Quebec and Miami symphonies.

As a conductor, violinist and teacher she is baffled by the neglect of women at the podium.

"People find it difficult to get used to something new, but if orchestra management would stick its neck out and start presenting women, pretty soon the novelty would wear off," she said.

A "non-prodigy" who began playing violin at 11 years of age, Ms. Stark studied at McGill University's Conservatory of Music and later at Philadelphia's Curtis Institute of Music under Fritz Reiner.

She performed as a soloist with the Curtis Symphony Orchestra, the Montreal Symphony, Les Concerts Symphoniques, the CBC Symphony and others.

Ms. Stark describes her conducting technique as "more passionate and less cerebral."

"They always say you have to be big and strong to conduct because the process is so tiring."

"Well, I'm not strong but I give it all I've got. It's such a unique feeling to have 100 people in an orchestra and mould them into one."

"I make them play the way I think they should sound. I always try to find new interpretations."

"People often ask me why I chose to do what I do and I always think of that as a foolish question."

"The only answer is that I needed it."

THEY DANCE BETTER VANCOUVER (CP) — Ken Williams, 18, and David Hayes, 21, both of Toronto, decided they could dance better with each other than with their girlfriends at the Pacific National Exhibition's disco dance contest recently. They won the $1,250 top prize for the bump, hustle, jive and twist.

'MYSTERY GIRL'

Reunion tearful

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — Urging "Come to Ma-ma," softly in Spanish, Lucy Arguello was tearfully reunited with the four-year-old "mystery girl" abandoned in a Denver bar last month.

Mrs. Arguello of Clayton, N.M., vows she won't let the girl be taken away from her again.

"The first thing I'm going to do is take care of the legal questions," Mrs. Arguello said as she and Frances, the girl she has raised since she was a baby, left Denver juvenile court after their reunion Friday.

Judge Jon Lawritson ordered the child released to the custody of Mrs. Arguello, although she is neither Frances's natural mother nor her legal guardian.

Frances has been abandoned twice, and authorities dubbed her the "mystery girl" because the stories she told them were confusing.

Frances was little more than a year old when her mother gave her to Mrs. Arguello.

"I just asked her to give her to me and she did," Mrs. Arguello said in court. She said the mother was unwed and the father was an illegal alien.

Mrs. Arguello took care of Frances until last Aug. 19, when several friends were drinking in her home.

One woman, Sandy Martinez, took the child outside and never returned, Mrs. Arguello testified. Authorities were unable to find the girl.

Frances became a ward of the city after midnight Aug. 22.
