

Out of work men travel in style

WEYMOUTH, Mass. (AP) — On the theory that if you get laid off, it's better to go in style, two firefighters went home from their final day on the job in a $75,000 Rolls-Royce Silver Shadow.

"This what I call class," said Bill O'Meara, 32, who drove home in the chauffeured luxury car. "But to be truthful, it's quite an extreme to go to — losing your job and all — just to ride in a Rolls."

With him was Paul Collins, 32, who quit his job as a plumber six months ago to join the fire department.

The men were laid off because of town budget cuts prompted by a statewide property tax-limiting measure approved by the voters in November.

Money for free

BLANCHETER, Ohio (AP) — A successful build-der plans to drop 1,000 $1 bills on his old hometown from a helicopter this weekend.

Brenda Fields, co-chairman of the first July 4th celebration in this farm community in years, said she originally intended to drop play money for the children.

Pooch on loose

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — A $3,000 racing greyhound has traded in a life of chasing mechanical rabbits for the freedom of chasing the real thing in a field south of Orlando International Airport.

The blue brindle racing dog, K's Poor Boy, has been running loose since June 23, when he arrived here on a flight from Mobile, Ala.
