It is bad enough to be punished for your errors at the bridge table. But sometimes it seems that there is no justice-you might also get punished for an act that is beyond reproach. No one can fault West's one heart opening bid. Once South responded to the double with one no trump, showing not only a stopper in the enemy suit but some 8-10 points, North wasted no time in reaching his optimum spot.

Since he had no sure re-entry, West made the perfectly reasonable lead of his fourth-best heart, and had he not opened the bidding, the contract would surely have been defeated. Declarer had only eight fast tricks, and with nothing to guide him, the obvious way to develop the ninth was via a club finesse. A winning hook or a 4-3 heart split would have assured the contract. Here, however, West could not have an opening bid without the club king and he was also marked with five hearts, so declarer had to engineer an end play to bring home his contract.

He won the heart lead in hand, then cashed four rounds of spades and the ace-king of diamonds, stripping all the cards he could from the West hand. He now needed some luck-West had to have started with no more than two diamonds.

With the groundwork laid, declarer could only hope for the best. He exited with a heart and sat back to see what would happen. West cashed his four heart tricks, and then, fortunately, he was down to nothing but clubs. He was forced to lead away from his king into declarer's combined tenace, allowing de-clarer to score two club tricks and

High and Mighty: Duke of Windsor, Cancer, gave up his throne for "the woman I love." The Duke, who was King of England, enjoyed the songs and entertainment offered by Madame Bricktop, legendary Leo nightclub proprietor. Bricktop, a fa-vorite of socialites, talks about astrology to the Duke and Duchess (Gemini) and teaches them the dance of the day, the "Black Bottom." Another example of the major role astrology plays among the high and the mighty. Bricktop said, "Astrology appeals to high-class people."
