

Remembering the Eighties

The Eighties

Visions

A decade in pictures

In one of the most indelible images of the 1980s, the U.S. space shuttle Challenger explodes (above) after launching on Jan. 28, 1986, killing all seven crew members aboard. The U.S. space program's launch schedule was put on hold until 1989.

(Above left) An unidentified man places his hand against the black granite wall of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington D.C., on Nov. 11, 1986, as he joined a large group of people visiting the memorial on Veterans Day.

(Left) A man stands draped in coats and blankets over a steam vent in freezing temperatures in Philadelphia in December 1987. The man, who refused to identify himself, said he had spent the night on the street and refused to go to a shelter for the homeless.
