

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Villagers near the Russian town of Lipetsk think thirsty visitors from space may be trying to kidnap the local milkman, a newspaper reported this week. The daily Selskaya Zhizn quoted Vladimir Akhaltsev as saying he was trailed by a shining ball one night as he drove his milk truck to a dairy near Lipetsk, close to the southern city of Voronezh where Soviet media reported the landing of three-eyed extra-terrestrials last fall. It said Akhaltsev speeded up to escape the alien craft, but even when he reached 100 kilometres an hour "the ball was still following him. For half an hour he tried to throw it off his tail." When the terrified driver reached the dairy and told the watchman of his encounter, the man pointed silently to the ball hovering above a nearby shop. Farmers in three villages also claimed to have seen the ball, the paper said, leading them to ask: "If thirsty humanoids steal our driver, who is going to deliver the milk?" Russians are fascinated by unidentified flying objects and the media regularly carries reports of unusual landings.
