"Our goal was to design a project ... that at the end of the day, people look at it say, it looks like it always was there, that it fits in Wrigley Field," said Mark McGuire, the Cubs executive vice president of business operations, said Monday.

"We have no intention of playing with the icon scoreboard, ivy, marquee — the things we all could agree are really the core elements of Wrigley Field," he said.

The renovations will add 2,300 seats to Wrigley, which currently has a capacity of 39,059, and cost $11 million. The changes will be completed by the start of next season, assuming approval by the city of Chicago approves the plans.

Johnson said he hoped that Roger Neilson would also accept a one-year offer to return as an assistant to head coach Jacques Martin before the end of the week. He gave no indication of who the new assistant

USA Hockey adds players

Canadian Press

Right-winger Scott Young, with a career-high 40 goals this season for the St. Louis Blues, and defenceman Brian Rafalski, who helped the New Jersey Devils return to the Stanley Cup final, were both added to the American Olympic hockey team Monday.

USA Hockey made the announcements via conference call.

The Olympic call is the first ever for Rafalski, 27, whose 18 points in this year's NHL playoffs left him second among defenceman behind Colorado's Rob Blake (19 points). Young, 33, a 14-year NHL veteran and two-time Stanley Cup champion with Pittsburgh and Colorado, has appeared in two pre-vious Olympic competitions, 1988 in Calgary and 1992 in Lillehammer, Norway.

"Both are deserving," associated general man-ager Larry Pleau said of Young and Rafalski. "To me, Brian Rafalski is one of the best defencemen in the NHL and will prove that over the next three or four years.'
