

"CHEZ CARLA" ADDS SOME VARIETY TO COMEDY NETWORK

You'd think Carla Collins had enough to keep her busy. Last year at this time, she was the co-host of "eNow," CTV's weekly entertainment magazine; the entertainment correspondent for the Toronto CTV affiliate, CFTO; and a sly, saucy advice columnist for "Blonde Magazine." Yet, despite her busy schedule, Collins regularly found time to fill in as a guest DJ on Toronto radio stations, willingly rising early to do the morning shift.

The work harkened back to her early career as radio host in Montreal, but she didn't do it out of nostalgia. Working on radio provided a venue for the loose, goofy comedy Collins loves to perform. It gave her the kind of satisfaction that was missing from her information-oriented TV career.

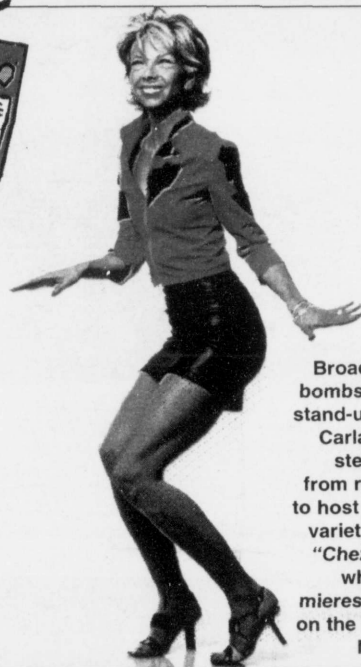

"There is a spontaneity to radio," the 30-something Collins explains. She will try to replicate that spontaneity on TV beginning Sunday, April 23, on the Comedy Network with "Chez Carla," a retro twist on the once-popular variety show genre.

"If (1960s hipster talk show) 'Playboy After Dark' and 'The Carol Burnett Show' had a baby, it would be ('Chez Carla')," suggests Collins, a sometime stand-up comic and former Weather Network anchor who created "Chez Carla" with the help of her "eNow" producers.

The weekly half-hour series, which promises comedy, music and talk in a lounge-like setting, is taped before a live audience in Toronto's old Masonic Temple, the setting for Comedy Net's "Open Mike" with Mike Bullard.

"The show's very modern, but the feel of it is a Broadcasting bombshell and stand-up comic Carla Collins steps away from reporting to host her new variety series, "Chez Carla," which premieres Sunday on the Comedy Network.
