

When The Provincial Government Doesn't
Even Give You

Lemons

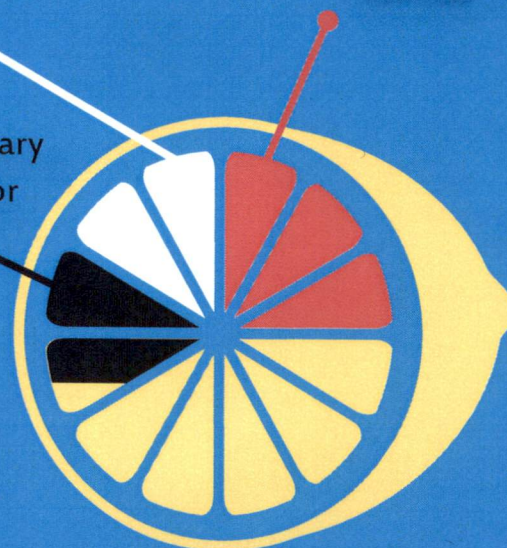

It's pretty hard to make lemonade

The national average for student debt is $27,000.

BC students graduate with an average of $35,000 in debt.

Funding for Post-Secondary institutes has stagnated or been cut in BC.

Colleges and universities are caught in the funding squeeze between stagnant funding and frozen tuition and just can't make ends meet. To try and balance budgets, schools are forced to cut programs, increase class sizes and leave less room for domestic students. Students have already been squeezed dry for their education, they can't pay more tuition. The only solution is to increase school funding from the provincial government.

Students are being squeezed.
Schools are being squeezed.

It's time to Squash the Squeeze
