All thanks aside; this month certainly earned the title of, "March Madness." The first few days can only be described as exciting as the electoral results were nothing short of a surprise. I am of course referring to the tie which resulted in the voting for the International Students' Representative position between Muhammad Rujman Hussain and Aditi Kaushik. International Women's Day continued to be an immense success. There was a breakfast on March 7th as well as the post-secret event where all students and faculty had the opportunity to anonymously share their experiences as a woman or their experiences with women.

The College of New Caledonia Film Festival, put on by Peter Maedis, was also a great success with a large crowd. We received a great article by your new Secretary for the CNCSU Executive Committee, Shannon Williams. Be sure to read it.

The school is currently ready in anticipation for the holiest of holidays, St. Patrick's Day. To this I say, don't drink and drive, and be sure to wear suitable protection if you consensually find yourself in a stranger's bed. Kids are great, but not having to extract bologna from your computers disc drive is even better.

Also, be sure to check out this month's main event, Post North: Girls, an all-female poetry reading at the Twisted Cork. Graham Pearce has written a great article and you can read more about the event in this publication. As per usual, happy reading and submit all submissions to: the.confluence.mag@gmail.com
