

Hey guys,

With orientation finished, it's always interesting in my mind to see how the student body adapts to a new school year. The excitement of a new year starts to slowly fade away and routine becomes the biggest priority. Some may be having quizzes or even starting essays. It's a crazy, demanding world. What I've learned personally is that school is a marathon, not a race. If you go too hard too soon, you will more than likely burn yourself out. I found that out the hard way, with the job of publishing two issues a month and serving the student body at the Student's Union office.

Due to the workload, the Students' Union started a formal search for a brand new News Editor to fill that void and share some of the work load. The Confluence takes pride in showcasing the best works of the CNC Student body, and I would be doing a disservice if I were to be doing the job alone. After doing class presentations last week and posting posters around the college, I am very happy to announce that we have found our bright, new editor. Starting with this issue, Paige Riding is the Confluence's News Editor. She fit all of our criteria for a new co-worker and has already proven to me how capable she is for the job. With Paige being the News Editor, we can spread our reach even further, bringing you an even higher quality product. I am very excited to be moving forward with Paige being a part of the Student's Union team.

I would like to wish everyone who is reading this, the best. The one thing that we all have in common is that our lives have lead us to CNC. My belief is that we all share at least that trait. If you see me in the hallway, don't be afraid to say hello and introduce yourself. At the end of the day, my job is to share your voice. Let's have a chat, sometime!

Cheers,
