

CNC'S SPORTS INITIATIVE

BY: DAMON ROBINSON

Last Tuesday, (January 8th, 2019) the College of New Caledonia's Students' Union and student Kyndra Farrell took to the gathering place to begin signups for the college's newest potential sports team(s). I went and had a chat with Kyndra, who facilitated the volleyball sign-ups, and got more information regarding the new pro-sports movement here at CNC.

Kyndra has had a long history of playing in various sports teams, particularly in volleyball. Throughout the last week, Kyndra has been fielding sign-ups for both the men's and women's volleyball team so that the process of starting can begin as early as this week (Week of January 14th, 2018). She then went on to tell me that the hope is for official team tryouts to be during the reading break, with an actual team being formed under the college banner.

The sports team movement has been a long time coming, and with the process officially taking root last semester as a push to improve student life at CNC by the student's union.

This process follows the previous few months going, where students amongst others have recently begun to question why there wasn't a sports team already in place at the college. Needless to say, the development of a sport at the college is no doubt a massive improvement to student life and CNC pride. I asked Harman Dandiwal, a key figure in setting up the development process, what the current update on the CNC Sports Initiative is. "The sports team has been well received by the college," said Harman.
