

THE PUBIC DISCUSSION

BY: CHRISTINE FORCE

A friend recently told me she had received a dick pic. We laughed and joked about the absurdity of it. Later my mind began to think. I really do not like genitalia. Male or female, including my own. They can do amazing things, necessary for the continuation of life things. But why do they have to be so disgusting?

I'll start with the male organ, because that is what started the thought train. The first time I saw a real live man penis it was a hard, pink, pulsating, veiny thing. It looked like a sea cucumber, but not as long. I was speechless. Something that repulsive is attached to a man's body? And it's supposed to be sexy? And it's supposed to go where? And I'm supposed to like it? Eww! Minutes past, and then, to my horror, I saw a man's penis in its relaxed form. This is attractive? Not to me. Wrinkly little bugger, curled up and tired, lying on its sweaty nest of...ball sack? Now, perhaps you need to develop a "palette" for penises. Or see a variety of them to appreciate their "beauty". But, in reality, they are ugly.

To be fair, let's look at the female genitals. Soft, moist, fleshy, an extra hole in a woman with a bloody curse every month that is prone to infection if anything disturbs its delicate ph. A beautiful flower? Not. Maybe a Venus fly trap? Giant clam? The underside of a mushroom? A hybrid of all three? Vaginas are not the prettiest. They remind me of an orifice from the movie Alien. Just without the teeth. I cannot fathom a person's real reaction to seeing one for the first time. Pink, slimy hole. I'm ashamed to say I own one.

I do not see the appeal of penises or vaginas. To me they are not "special, beautiful, sexy organs", but a dirty trick. Creation gives you a glistening beautiful man or a voluptuous woman, entices you to fall in love with them, and then, BAM! Suck this ugly thing I've stuck between its legs.
