

Nacho Average Article

by Raegan Cote

What do you call cheese that's not yours?

Nacho cheese, that's my cheese!

Ah, I make myself laugh. Now let's get down to business. I, as well as much of the population of the world, am a big fan of the nacho. You can't go wrong ordering nachos, no matter the time, place, or mood. Nachos for breakfast gives me as much joy as nachos in the evening. The moment I see my server come around the corner with a piping hot plate of tortillas and cheese, it makes me feel some kinda way.

My mission today is to educate the average nacho consumer about the best nachos in Prince George. It isn't always as simple as melting your ordinary toppings on chips, the consumer should feel the love with every crunch. I don't want anyone to suffer through any more burnt cheese, soggy chips, or tasteless salsa. You may consider me your own personal Nacho Yoda. Follow me as I gift with you the top five nachos in town.

*Disclaimer: I have not been endorsed by any of the following restaurants. These are based on my opinion and I do not claim they are facts.*

5. Starting us off in fifth place, the West Wood Pub is undoubtedly a go-to nacho stop. You can't beat sitting round the table and sharing some good ol' classic pub grub, and the West Wood Pub does it right. Never underestimate the power of the pub nacho.

4. Boston Pizza nachos had to make it on the list. Don't shame me, we all know they do a fantastic nacho. There is consistently the perfect ratio of chip to cheese to vegetable. My favourite part is that you'll never run out of salsa or sour cream, as they have the largest sauce ramekins of all the restaurants I have dined in.

3. If you've ever set foot in the Great Canadian Brewhouse, I guarantee you would have seen an order of these monster size nachos come waltzing out of the kitchen, all the way to a table of burly men ready to feast. These nachos are easily the best bank for your buck out of this list, this town, and potentially even the world. They are stacked so high that not even the hungriest of humans could manage. The chips are topped with the classic toppings, and therefore give you the authentic nacho taste. All of these reasons have pushed the Brewhouse up to third on the list.
