

2. Just shy of the very best, are BX Pub nachos. I've always thought the BX makes the best pub food in town, so it is no surprise they made it on the list. These nachos are topped with everything a nacho lover could ever dream of. From pickled jalapeños, to banana peppers, to black olives, these guys know how to do it the right way. Whether you are eating a single order to yourself, or feasting with others around a jug of beer, I couldn't hold these nachos to a higher degree. The BX nachos have my respect. They are simply stellar.

1. Ringing in first place, is the Browns Social House nachos. Elevated from the classic pub nachos, Browns fries their corn tortillas in house. The chips are then tossed in a smoky Mexican seasoning, and layered horizontally a silver tray, versus vertically like the usual order. This way, the toppings disperse evenly among the chips, and layer in such a way with each bite the flavours marry creating a sensory experience on the tastebuds. With each bite, ones tongue is enveloped with the spicy chunks of crisp jalapeño, the coolness of the sour cream, and the bright flavours of pico de gallo. This plate should be devoured and shared among loved ones, and is best paired with a classic margarita.

Despite this list being my favourites, I am never going to discriminate against a nacho. All nachos are beautiful. I am still willing to accept other opinions, as I am not totally set in my ways quite yet. I dare you to change my mind, recommend me a nacho, I guarantee I'll give it a go. Perhaps this article will provoke a nacho discourse, what a time that would be. To all the nacho lovers out there, I hope this list hit home. At the very least, I hope I've triggered a craving for nachos.
